Public hearings

The Upland Planning Commission will meet 7:30 tonight at city hall, 460 N. Euclid Ave. Among the public hearings are:

— Recodification of portions of the Upland Municipal Code addressing Chapter 1 on zoning and regulations and Chapter 2 on subdivisions. The proposal is intended as a reorganization of the code, not substantive changes in municipal law.

The applicant, Brad McColl, is resubmitting his plan for Bookbury School after the City Council rejected his previous request May 15. Nearby residents have expressed concern over potential noise and traffic problems. McColl has since expanded the amount of land for the school.

Company offers to donate 83-acre rock quarry

Olympics cycling track proposed locally

By Don Green

If the 1984 Olympic Games come to Los Angeles, they might also touch Claremont, Montclair and Upland.

That "if" is one of the uncertainties facing a $6 million - $7 million proposal by Claremont Men's College for a bicycling velodrome and other sports facilities in an 83-acre rock quarry owned by Consolidated Rock Co.

Steven Maaranen — associate professor of political science and cycling coach at Claremont Men's College — said that while a contract for the site might be renegotiated if plans for the Games fall through, "everything hinges on the Olympics at the moment."

Maaranen and Jack Stark, president of the college, are prime movers behind the proposal for the sports site. Conrock has agreed to turn over the 83-acre quarry to the college at no cost if the Olympics come to Los Angeles and if the site is selected for track cycling events, Maaranen noted.

Four of the six Olympic cycling events are sprints performed on a 333-meter track with heavily banked turns in a velodrome.

The other two events are road races, which the college's proposal tentatively shows circling Puddingstone Reservoir in Los Angeles County's Frank G. Bonelli Park.

The sports park site is bounded by Claremont Boulevard to the west, Arrow Highway (Sixth Street in Claremont) to the south, Foothill Boulevard to the north and an imaginary extension of Padua Avenue to the east.

Bisected by the boundary for San Bernardino and Los Angeles counties on a southwest-to-northeast diagonal, the western half of the land is in Claremont and eastern half is unincorporated county territory within Upland's sphere of influence.

Maaranen said plans for a joint meeting with planning representatives from the three cities have been postponed until the picture becomes clearer on whether Los Angeles will hold the 1984 Olympics.

As of today, the city of Los Angeles has 39 days left in which to sign a contract giving the city and the U.S. Olympic Committee full financial responsibility for conducting the Summer Games.

Los Angeles officials have balked at terms of the International Olympic Committee, and three businessmen on a committee appointed by Mayor Tom Bradley moved last week to incorporate a private, nonprofit Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

The purpose of the committee is to bring the Games to Los Angeles without any financial liability for the city.

If the Olympics come to Los Angeles, Maaranen said he believes there is a "good chance" the track cycling events could be held at the quarry site.

Although the quarry site faces competition from a rival proposal to build the velodrome at Pierce College in Los Angeles, the local plan has won the endorsements of the U.S. Cycling Federation and Southern California Committee for the Olympic Games, a private group made up of former U.S. Olympic athletes.

In addition to the velodrome, which would seat 10,000 for the Olympics, early plans show a stadium for football and soccer (where Claremont High School could play its home football games), about a half dozen playing fields for soccer and other sports, recreations rooms and tennis courts.

Maaranen said the land could also include picnic areas.

He pointed out the terrain would be sculptured and landscaped to avoid the appearance of a "giant gravel pit into which several sports facilities have been dropped."

Because the site straddles two counties and two cities, Maaranen noted it will probably double the paperwork necessary to get the proposal off the ground. Approval of an environmental impact report for the proposal would be a key factor in making the sports complex a reality.

However, Maaranen does not foresee many adverse impacts from the sports facilities. Traffic would have access from Claremont and Foothill boulevards and the 10,000 fans at the Olympics would be a one-shot gathering, he said.

Only 3,000-4,000 of the velodrome seats would be permanent. Maaranen pointed out the velodrome could be converted for tennis, swimming or a theater in the

SPORTS PARK — Steven Maaranen — former Olympic cyclist and associate professor of political science and cycling coach at Claremont Men's College — looks over plans for proposed sports facilities. Maaranen and Jack Stark, president of the college, hope a worked-out rock quarry partially in Upland's sphere of influence will be chosen the site for a bicycling velodrome for the 1984 Olympic Games. Tentative plans for the 83-acre complex show a variety of other sports and recreational uses. So far, prospects hinge on the Olympics coming to Los Angeles. (Photo by Don Green)

Summer classes cut, other decisions delayed

By Don Green

As expected, the Chaffey Joint Union High School District board Monday night joined school districts throughout the state in canceling summer school, including adult education classes.

About 600 parents, students, teachers and others packed Merton Hill Auditorium at Chaffey High School in Ontario for the second week in a row to hear how the board would cope with reduced revenues under the Jarvis-Gann initiative.

The board voted unanimously to restrict busing to and from school to students living four miles or more away, compared to the current two-mile limit. The district will cancel orders for seven buses totaling $280,000 and save another $95,000 by reducing the number of runs next year from 26 to six.

While the board made cuts totaling some $1.1 million, trustees postponed any decision on closing Mountain High Alternative School in Upland and on declaring a formal "state of emergency" that could allow the board to later forgo agreed-on pay increases for teachers and other certificated employees.

Trustees listened for more than an hour and a half to appeals — often emotional and moving — by students, recent graduates, parents and teachers to keep Mountain High open.

George Robbins, representing Myers Industrial Properties Inc., told the board he had watched the speakers on cable television before coming to the meeting. He said the deadline could be extended for notifying the owner of the warehouse that serves as home for Mountain High.

The current three-year lease expires Aug. 31, and the district decision on entering a new lease had been due by June 30.

Superintendent Mike Dirksen praised the school and said his recommendation that it be closed "distresses me deeply."

He pointed out that prospects of finding funds for a permanent home for Mountain High are "dim," and added closure would save the district about $100,000, including the $18,660 lease.

Robert Erickson, assistant superintendent for instruction, said Mountain High's 206 students could be relocated at Valley View High School in Ontario and some might join evening adult school. At least some of the nine Mountain High teachers could be reassigned to Valley View and others would serve elsewhere in the district, he added.

Nearly 40 speakers requested that the board continue the alternative school at 1253 W. Ninth St., Upland.

Students related problems they faced at the district's five comprehensive high schools, and several parents and students said many would drop out of school altogether if Mountain High is closed.

The board agreed to postpone consideration of closing Mountain High while waiting for state legislation telling the district how much property tax and state surplus money it will receive in 1978-79.

Representatives of Associated Chaffey Teachers and other district employees sharply criticized Dirksen's recommendation that the board declare a state of emergency.

Dirksen explained that the action would give the board the option of delaying or not granting certificated employees a 4 percent pay increase July 1 and a 2.75 percent hike next February. He estimated the maximum potential savings at $1 million.

The board instructed the staff to further research the law (SB 120). Dirksen said that if action is not taken before July 1, the pay increases would have to be granted as part of a legally binding contract.

While the board reduced bus runs for 1978-79, it took no action regarding use of buses for field trips and athletic events. At its meeting June 12, trustees agreed to send out notices for possible termination coaches and other extra-duty personnel.

Dirksen has not recommended canceling athletics or other programs involved, but said that notification must be given before July 1 in case funds are not available.

Dirksen said 40-50 seniors in the district had counted on summer school to complete graduation requirements.

At Upland High School, some 1,200 students had registered for summer classes.

Upland Elementary

The Upland Elementary School District board last week also canceled its summer school program.

Superintendent George Renworth has estimated the district overall loss at $1.5 million under the Jarvis-Gann initiative.

Upland trustees are studying a list of possible cuts including higher class size, a shorter school calendar and sharply reduced transportation expenses with most busing eliminated.

At a meeting with district employees June 16, Renworth requested teachers and administrators forgo agreed-upon cost-of-living pay increases to help avoid layoffs of classified employees.

This is the time to cook your goose.

And wash your clothes. And run the vacuum.
And do some ironing. Why are we asking you to do it all in the morning?
Because your home runs on electricity. And so do factories, offices, your neighborhood store. Even the farm that grows your food.
And when the temperature rises during the day, air conditioners go on all over. The demand for electricity approaches a peak.

Many places — hospitals, for example — simply can't adjust their schedules to the time of day. But you can.

So if you do some of your chores in the morning to reduce the afternoon peak, we can delay building expensive new power plants and help keep future electric bills down.

Give your appliances the afternoon off. And give yourself a long lunch break.

When the heat's on, take a load off.

Give your appliances the afternoon off.

Board rejects free lunch plan

County supervisors decided last week they won't seek a federal grant that would pay for 650 lunches daily in 16 summer youth programs.

The supervisors rejected by a 4-1 vote the county Community Services Department's proposal for a $45,000 grant.

In a rare public split, the West End's two county supervisors lined up on opposite sides of the issue. Chairman Robert O. Townsend of Chino was the lone supervisor who favored the grant application. Supervisor Joseph Kamansky of Upland voted with the majority.

Kamansky said government spending "has to stop someplace."

"All programs are good, and this happens to be a good program, but where do you start and stop?" Kamansky asked.

Townsend said summer youth programs in San Bernardino and Ontario will have federally supported free lunches through special arrangements with the county's two largest cities.

"The rest of the county would go without unless we supported this program," Townsend said.

Of the 16 summer youth programs at which the free lunches would have been served, six are located in the West End.

James Fare, administrator of the county Human Resources Agency, defended the grant request by calling it an extension of the school lunch program.

"It sounds to me like we're venturing into a nutrition program for youth," Supervisor James L. Mayfield of Apple Valley replied.

Supervisor Dennis L. Hansberger of Yucaipa argued that such a program would encourage parents to be less responsible for their children.

He said it assumed that parents have no responsibility for daytime feeding of their children if they are not in school during the summer. He added:

"I happen to believe this program is an infringement upon the family. It is weaning children away from parental responsibility and teaching parents to be irresponsible toward their children."

"I consider it an immoral activity of government."

The supervisors said they weren't objecting to the lunches served free or at reduced prices during the regular school year and at summer school classes.

Workers rap pay delay

By PETER WONG

County employees told the board of supervisors Monday they aren't prepared to delay pay increases they are scheduled to receive July 1, despite Proposition 13's passage.

But the representative of the largest employees' association didn't close the door on the supervisors' proposal, which they made last week in hopes of saving nearly $5 million.

Richard C. Stearns, general manager of the San Bernardino Public Employees Association, called on the supervisors to do the following:

— Wait until the state Legislature decides how the state surplus should be spent to provide emergency relief to local governments, which will lose $7 billion in property tax income from the passage of Proposition 13.

San Bernardino County government will lose about $41 million of the $70 million it now collects in property taxes. But if the state agrees to pay for certain programs, the supervisors' choices may not be as difficult as they would be otherwise.

— Join with employees and county administrators in seeking ways to save money and provide service more efficiently, rather than considering pay freezes and employee layoffs as the first steps in cost-cutting.

Once that is done, "at that point we have to sit down and look at the other alternatives," Stearns, whose association represents nearly 90 percent of county employees, told the supervisors.

Under a three-year contract expiring in 1980, the 6,300 employees represented by the association are scheduled to receive pay increases of 5 percent July 1.

Two other groups of employees — 550 deputy marshals, and 100 sheriff's and marshal's sergeants, lieutenants and captains — are also entitled to pay increases under contracts running through mid - 1979.

Those groups are represented by the Sheriff's Employees Benefit Association.

Unless both associations agree to modify their contracts, the pay increases will be granted automatically and will amount to $4.7 million in the year starting July 1.

Stearns agreed with Supervisor Joseph Kamansky that since employee salaries and benefits account for most of the budget, substantial cuts that might be required would probably involve pay freezes and employee layoffs.

"Sooner or later you must get there," Stearns told the Upland supervisor. "The question is whether you go there first or only after you've exhausted your other remedies."

"It seems that when something like this hits, the fastest way to go (for savings) is to go to the employees and ask for sacrifices," Stearns said.

The employees also remember the $3.5 million in surplus funds that turned up at the last minute to balance the 1976-77 budget, "and the board lost a great deal of credibility," Stearns said.

Supervisor Dennis L. Hansberger of Yucaipa said the problem is made more difficult because the salary increases are scheduled for July 1, but that budget cuts won't be considered until August, at the recommendation of County Administrative Officer Earl Goodwin.

"We're asking you to look at something that's not comfortable to look at," he said.

NATURAL SETTING — Manuel Gonzales walks along Willow Flat Trail and the Santa Ana River which runs alongside museum.

Creatures abound in the natural setting, which dates back one million years.

Museum in the pastures

According to the best estimates of geologists, the Prado basin was formed about one million years ago, and — excluding a museum and a few cows — things haven't changed much.

This may be one of the reasons why visitors to the Prado Basin Park visitor's center and museum in Riverside County spend as much time outside looking at nature as inside looking at artifacts.

The museum is not exactly uptown. Visitors entering the park from Archibald Avenue at Red River Road near Norco are greeted by green rolling farmland and grazing cattle, a small flock of sheep and maybe a formation of geese overhead winging their way southward.

The Santa Ana River runs alongside the museum, easily accessible by nature paths descending to the edge of the deeply cut river bed.

Even visitors who arrive after hours — the museum is open 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. weekends — will still enjoy the setting.

The museum, one of three in Riverside County parks, is filled with historical information and current facts about the inhabitants and terrain surrounding the park.

Over half of the visitors to the museum — they numbered 18,000 last year — are school children whose teachers make field trips out of treks to the park. All of the displays the children see were prepared by the Riverside City Museum.

The Gabrielino Indians inhabited the area in the 1700s when the Prado region fell under the influence of the San Gabriel Mission, founded by Junipero Serra.

The museum displays explore the religion of these first inhabitants, their tools and cooking utensils.

Pictures explain how the Indians gathered acorns in the fall and stored them in the shell in basket granaries for future use. Other acorns were shelled, ground and leached for immediate use.

In the 1800s the region was occupied by settlers who sent their children to the Durkee - Rincon School. At the turn of the century the name of the town was changed to Prado. Old schoolbooks and a handbell used to announce lunchtime and recess in 1894 are on display at the museum.

Cattle ranching is depicted in large black and white photographs while the fiesta, a highlight of rancho life, is depicted in one display. Fiestas included parades, feasting, music, dancing, sports contests such as cockfights, roping, bear and bull fights, horse racing, and gambling.

In addition to the historical displays, live animals are exhibited — all animals found in the Prado region. Snakes, spiders and fish are explained to school children.

Many stuffed animals in glass cases demonstrate the wildlife that cannot be caged but lives richly in the near-wilderness setting. Weeds and flowers — and the dangers of harmful plants — are also on display.

Maps explain land divisions and show how Juan Bandini, once a secretary to Mexican governor Pio Pico, acquired Jurupa and El Rincon in 1838 with the first land grant confirmed by the United States.

Maps also show how the Prado Basin barrier began forming almost one million years ago and how rock strata folded to form the present crest of the Santa Ana Mountains and the Chino Hills.

The land around the museum is unspoiled and the creatures abound — from the squirrels that romp over the park roadways to the praying mantises that inhabit the hemlocks.

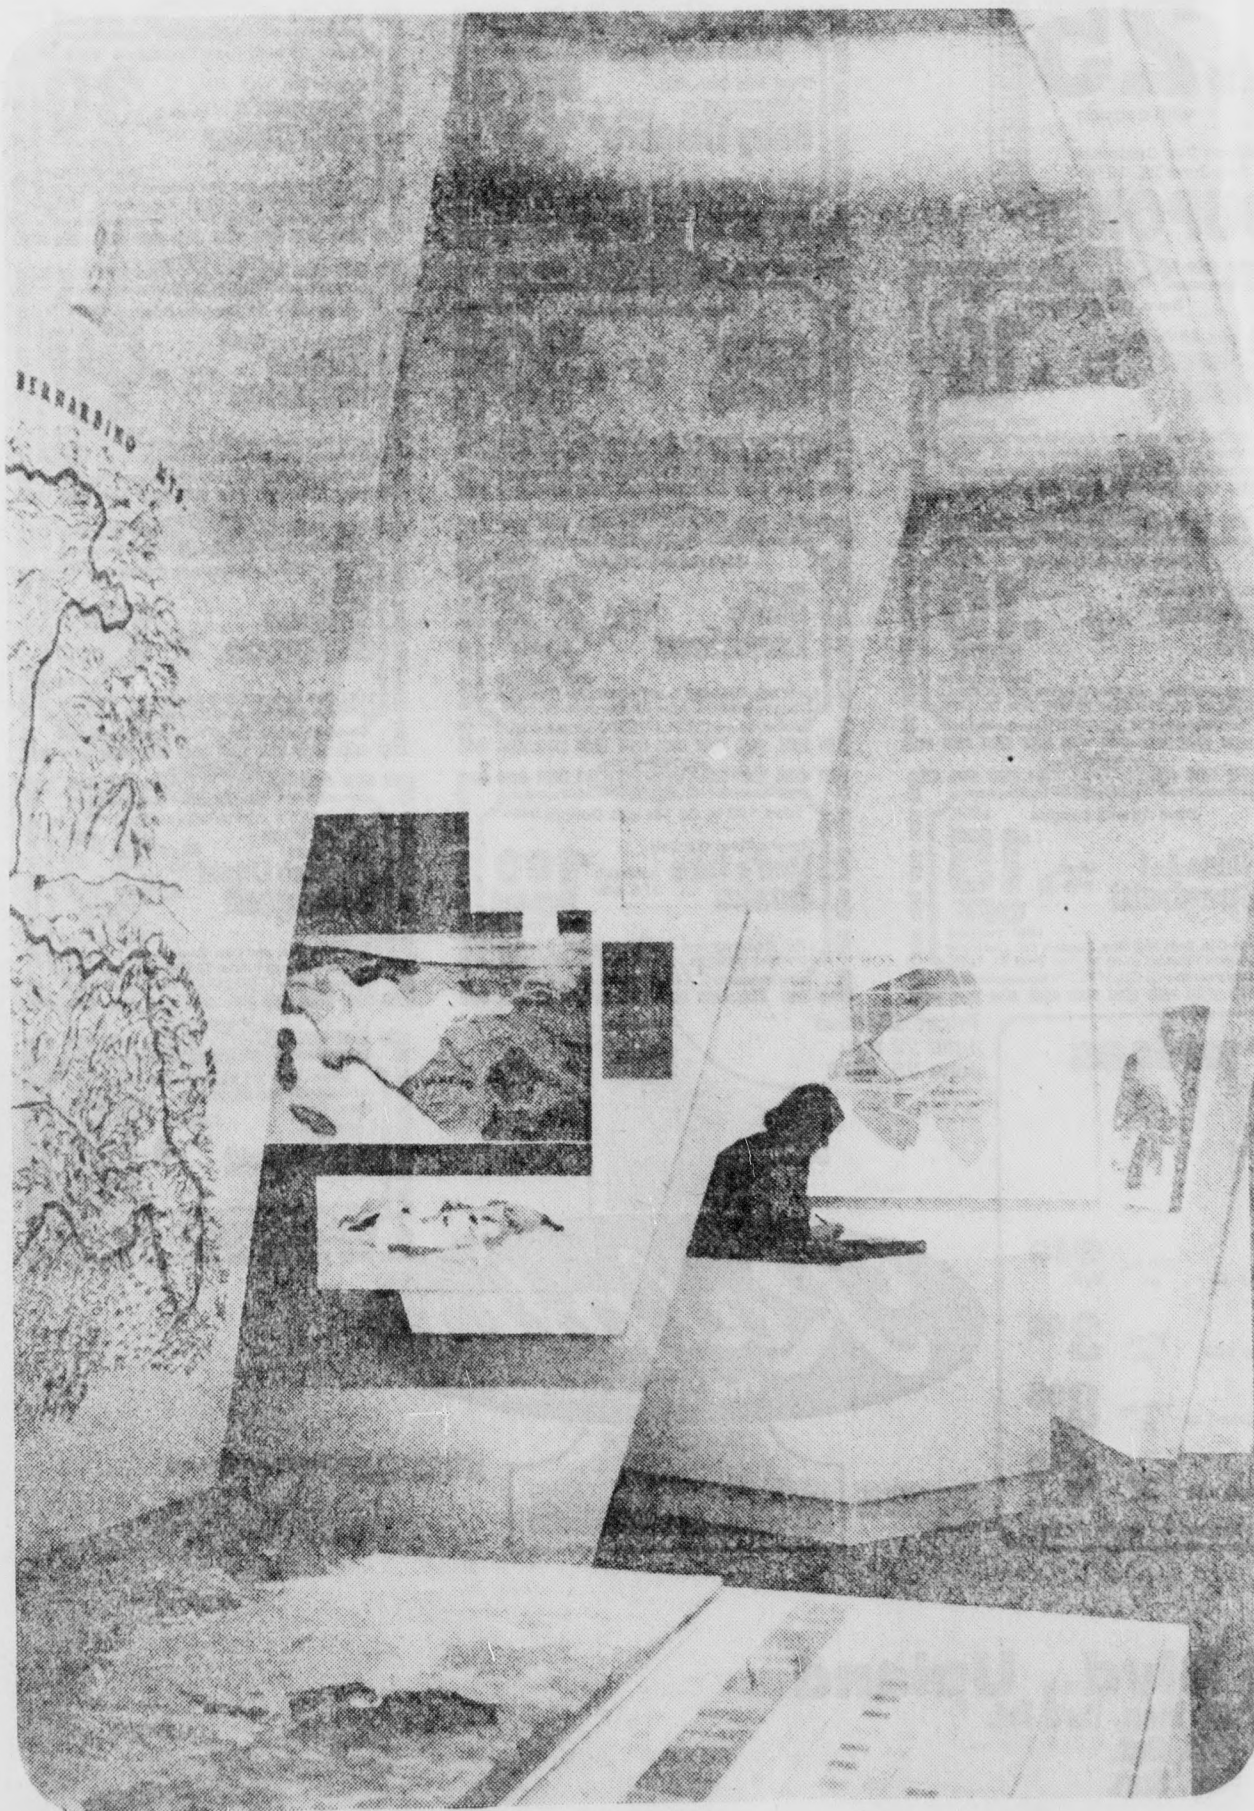

The regional county park is open 8 a.m. - sunset daily and features group and individual picnic areas, stoves, restrooms, and nature trails. Group camping is available by reservation.

MUSEUM IN A PARK —

Every nook and cranny in the Prado Basin Park Museum (photo to left) is filled with maps, photos and displays depicting the history of the area along the Santa Ana River. Students often visit the museum as part of class projects and field trips on Indian, mission padres, and ranchos.

LIVING EXHIBIT — Riverside County Parks naturalist Ann Dotterer plays with Rosy, a coastal rosy boa on display in the museum. Students are always invited to pet the snake. Other exhibits have stuffed animals and local weeds and flowers.

INDIAN HISTORY — The life-style of the Gabrielino Indians, the first inhabitants of the Prado Basin region, is depicted at the museum operated by the Riverside County Parks Department. Primarily hunters and gatherers, the Gabrielinos were skilled in basketry and many of their works are displayed at the museum. Remnants of the Indian culture are still in evidence in many parts of the park.

Bureaucracy is no answer to problems

By Dave Stirling
The question of how best California's land should be used and what regulations and restrictions should be placed on that usage is a problem of great concern for Californians today.

Faced with the prospect of uncontrolled urban sprawl, diminishing natural resources and potentially severe damage to our environment, California citizens are demanding that their elected officials adopt a more considered, long-range strategy of land-use and development, so that the future of our state may be protected.

This public demand is a justifiable response to a very serious problem, but the response of government on the state level has not been so praiseworthy. Blinded to all other possible solutions by their undying faith in the infallibility of bureaucracy, the regulatory zealots in our administration and the legislature have responded to the problem by trying to strip cities and counties of any say at all in the planning process and placing the whole of this authority in the hands of an all-powerful, centralized state agency.

The perfect example of this tendency is seen in the creation of the California Coastal Commission two years ago. Originally conceived of as a state-level mediator of local problems and conflicts, the Coastal Commission has exploited its veto power over local plans and proposals to the extent that it effectively dictates land-use policy for the whole of California's thousand-mile coastline.

This tendency is also seen in a number of land-use planning proposals currently under consideration by the legislature. Governor Brown's 45-point "urban strategy package," for example, contains several bills aimed at centralizing all urban land-use, growth and redevelopment priority-setting and decisions in state agencies.

In a similar vein, a bill to preserve agricultural lands by Assemblyman Victor Calvo (D-Mountain View) calls for the creation of an all-powerful state agency (the Agriculture Resources Council) along the same lines as the Coastal Commission.

The Agriculture Resources Council would be composed almost wholly of state officials and gubernatorial appointees, with limited input from local government and agricultural interest, and would have the same unlimited veto power over local plans and proposals as the Coastal Commission.

Fortunately, Calvo's bill is unlikely to be enacted in its pure form because of opposition from the state Senate, which has passed its own agricultural land-preservation bill.

This bill authored by Sens. George Zenovich (D-Fresno) and John Garamendi (D-Stockton), is very similar to the Calvo bill in most respects. But the state-level agency it sets up would be composed of representatives of local government and agriculture and would serve only as a "court of last resort" when local plans conflict with statewide interests.

If an agricultural land-preservation bill does pass this year, it will most likely represent a compromise between these two bills.

Such a compromise is better than nothing. But the fact that one effort to graft another layer onto our ponderous state-level bureaucracy has possibly been thwarted hardly represents a decisive victory.

The ultimate objective of the most zealous proponents of strict, state-level land-use regulation, such as the Sierra Club, is the creation of a regulatory super-agency with total and unlimited control over all local plans and programs.

And although two bills designed to create such an agency have already gone down to defeat (one in 1974 and one in 1976), it's a sure bet that yet another will be emerging soon.

All those proposals pose a serious threat to our cherished concepts of individual freedom and home rule. By taking away local government's voice in decisions central to its own welfare, they chip away at local autonomy and leave all California's citizens more and more dependent upon the benevolence of the state.

Further, there is no reason to believe that decrees handed down by an all-powerful bureaucratic agency will be as effective or as wise as those developed by local officials under the close scrutiny of the public.

Local government is clearly in the better position to know what is best for its area than a disinterested bureaucratic body hundreds of miles away. And, unlike the bureaucrats who staff such agencies, local government officials are accountable for their decisions.

There is no question that California must follow a more prudent course in its land and resource usage than it has in its past. But tossing away the freedoms and responsibilities stemming from home-rule in a blind panic, creates more problems than it solves, leaving further generations a legacy they would rather be without.

(Stirling, a Republican, represents the 64th Assembly District, which includes Diamond Bar, Rowland Heights, and Walnut.)

Proposals deal with 'Junk' telephone calls

By Terry Goggin

When Alexander Graham Bell received a patent for his newly invented telephone in 1876, far-thinking people of the day accurately predicted it would cause a revolution in world communications, but their crystal balls apparently failed to foresee the problems destined to accompany that revolution.

Like many other technological advances, Bell's little black box is the subject of numerous complaints brought to the attention of the State Legislature.

Ironically, the same American inventiveness which produced the telephone a century ago is now blamed for one of the problems.

Commercial firms — which recognized the telephone's weighty potential in the sales field years ago — have developed machines which automatically dial phone numbers and play a recorded message to anyone who happens to pick up the receiver on the other end.

Many Californians who pay the bills for the state's estimated 13 million telephones have asked lawmakers to do something about these "junk" phone calls.

Telephone messages, they say, are a greater nuisance than junk mail which can be thrown away at their leisure. Even if they immediately hang up on a junk call which gets them out of bed or the shower, the computer sales pitch continues to tie up their phone lines.

An investigation of automated telephone solicitation devices recently was ordered by the Public Utilities Commission (PUC). Prior to the PUC's announcement, two nearly identical bills regulating junk phone calls were introduced into both houses of the legislature.

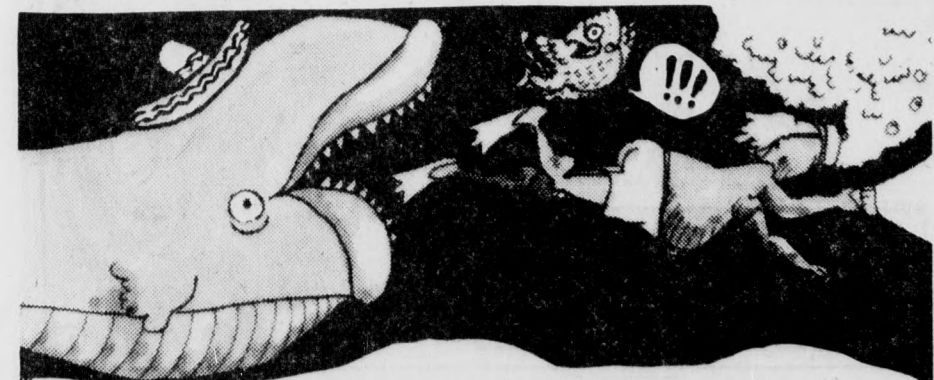

AB 2179 by Assemblyman Bill Lockyer (D-San Leandro) and SB 1352 by Senator John Stull (R-Escondido) would allow Californians to register, with local phone companies, their objections to receiving commercial calls. Solicitation firms would be prohibited from calling anyone whose name is listed in the privacy record.

Representatives of the firms have protested introduction of the legislation and the PUC's investigation. They claim a relatively high response rate to the calls proves the public does not oppose them.

In late January the Assembly sent other "telephone" legislation to the state Senate. The measure, AB 43 by Assemblyman Richard Robinson (D-Garden Grove), would make permanent a previous legislative prohibition against charges for directory assistance.

The temporary ban is rooted in telephone company plans to charge customers each time they dial for help in locating a phone number. If passed by the Senate and signed by the governor, AB 43 permanently will prohibit the PUC from permitting telephone companies to assess a separate charge for information calls.

Celebrating our 75th Year "Four Generations of Caring"

PROJECT HOPE — Physicians, nurses and allied health workers reach out "hands of hope" to residents of Guatemala, devastated by a 1976 earthquake. Public health programs are working to train health workers in community. Other training programs work to increase the numbers of doctors, nurses and health aides who can provide regional care.

Ministry celebrates 20th anniversary

HOPE gives medical training

Peace talks in the Middle East, congressional stalemate on welfare reform, national debate on nuclear energy — the headline stories of the past several months.

Yet some stories are newsworthy because they are not new, because the same events repeat themselves over and over again.

Since its founding in 1958, that's just what's been happening with Project HOPE. In 1960 the S.S. HOPE was launched and nurses aboard started training programs in Indonesia. Some 500 physicians and nurses were trained.

Church seeks to reach deaf

SAN DIEGO — Placing an ever-increasing emphasis on service to the handicapped has been a characteristic of the Most Rev. Leo T. Maher, Catholic Bishop of San Diego. His latest move to assist the deaf population of the diocese entails sending two representatives to a summer workshop at the only four-year liberal arts college for the deaf in the United States.

Anna Espana, a student at the University of San Diego and coordinator for the Catholic Deaf Circle, along with Chris Potter, a diocesan seminarian, will travel to Washington D.C. for the summer program at Gallaudet College.

Both will be taking classes that will increase their ability to serve the needs of the deaf of San Diego. Specifically, they will deal with questions relating to deafness and the deaf community as well as sign language. They will be exposed to many religious or pastoral experiences of the deaf Christian. The summer seminar includes trips to various organizations for the deaf in the Washington area.

The Diocese of San Diego encompasses more than 35,000 square miles of the counties of San Diego, San Bernardino, Riverside and Imperial.

In 1961 Vietnamese interns and residents were trained along with 200 Vietnamese nurses. In 1962 more than 600 Peruvian medical personnel trained with HOPE professionals.

In 1963 it was Ecuador's turn. And every year thereafter the story repeated itself.

During the year 1978, Project HOPE celebrates 20 years of medical teaching and training on five continents.

HOPE, the project a ship launched, was started in 1958 by Dr. William B. Walsh "with $150 and a lot of faith in the American people." Recalling the early days of the Project, Dr. Walsh has said: "I knew then that to go to disadvantaged areas of the world solely for the purpose of treatment would be like walking through quicksand, so our programs would emphasize teaching to so improve their skills that they could meet their own problems and be self-sufficient."

It took two years to refit the 15,000-ton Navy hospital ship, U.S.S. Consolation, which was rechristened the S.S. HOPE. The call was put out for American doctors, nurses and technologists to share their knowledge with the people of developing nations.

For every American on board there would be a counterpart to be trained. From its beginning, the HOPE concept captured the imagination of the world.

On Sept. 22, 1960 at 4:12 p.m., the S.S. HOPE pulled away from Pier 50-A under clear San Francisco skies. Aboard were the finest medical professionals, selected from thousands of applicants. The mission was unprecedented. Never before had a peacetime hospital ship sailed the ocean.

Indonesia and South Vietnam were the first ports of call. By the end of that inaugural mission 300 nurses and 200 doctors had been trained. Some 20 nations around the world had asked to be next in line for a HOPE visit.

Peru was chosen because assistance was needed desperately and the staff felt it could be most effective there. In May of 1962 the S.S. HOPE sailed again from San Francisco, this time for the city of Trujillo, in northern Peru.

The arrival was not gala. The welcoming committee was a gray mare and six bearded Peruvians waving "Yankee, Go Home" signs.

But the antagonism soon melted.

When HOPE departed 10 months later, 45,000 Peruvians came to give the staff a heartwarming farewell. After departure a HOPE land team helped set up a new university teaching hospital and nursing school. HOPE continues in that country today. Missions followed to Ecuador, Guinea, Nicaragua, Colombia, Ceylon, Tunisia, the West Indies, and Natal and Macejo in Brazil.

Project HOPE departed from its ship - oriented programs in 1969 and began using the teaching techniques learned abroad in existing facilities in the American southwest.

HOPE programs provided both careers and health knowledge to the Mexican-American community of Laredo. The first Indian-operated hospital and hospital system was inaugurated by HOPE in the United States on the 16-million-acre Navajo reservations. Another domestic program in El Paso opened in 1974.

In April of 1974 the decision was made to retire the S.S. HOPE. With the ship no longer part of the operational capability, HOPE devoted more attention to broadening the horizons of land-based programs.

HOPE has been able to respond to invitations from countries which do not have adequate port facilities, countries in equal need. HOPE now has programs in Peru, Tunisia, the Caribbean, Brazil, Colombia, Egypt, Poland and Guatemala.

More than 2,500 North American medical personnel have served with the project and HOPE has trained over 10,000 physicians, dentists, nurses, and allied health personnel.

HOPE has also pioneered new concepts in the use of allied and basic health personnel; helped establish new schools of nursing, dentistry, and physical therapy; assisted in the development of existing teaching institutions; worked in hospitals to teach and implement improved methods of patient care; and helped expand public health efforts.

In the process, over 191,000 were treated, more than 18,750 major operations conducted, and over three million benefited from the services involved. In Latin America alone the work of the Project HOPE has resulted in a $100 million investment by host countries in their own medical institutions.

Since 1958 Project HOPE has succeeded in establishing tremendous credibility throughout the world. In Ecuador HOPE doctors introduced corneal transplants. In Ceylon heart valve surgery and training programs in the field of cancer scanning for women were introduced.

Throughout northeast Brazil HOPE sparked creation of a network of improved health educational resources for upgrading nursing. HOPE programs in Natal (Brazil) were responsible, at least in part, for a drop in infant mortality from 110 per thousand in 1975 to a record low of 84 in 1976. HOPE has been responsible for four of the six well-child clinics in Natal.

In Colombia the University Hospital of Cartagena was built as a result of HOPE's mission to the port city in 1967. Due to HOPE's university-level program, faculty and administrators were able to assume responsibility for operation of Peru's only school of nursing north of Lima. Later in Trujillo, HOPE provided graduate education in the field of special education, the first program of this type in that country.

An outstanding example of international understanding and cooperation has developed in the HOPE-Egypt-H.E.W. Secretariat Medical Exchange program, with American scientists traveling to Egypt and Egyptian professionals coming to the United States.

By early 1979 Project HOPE will have fulfilled plans for a new Project HOPE Health Sciences Education and Research Center in Millwood, Virginia. The center will also serve as the new "home" for the project.

No contributions to regular Project HOPE operational activities are being used for construction or renovation. The contributed funds will be utilized only to support HOPE's worldwide health education programs.

At the center, HOPE will establish a program of scholars - in residence - men and women with sabbatical leave - whose wisdom and experience can challenge national and international health problems and produce research which meets the highest academic standards.

Also active at the new center will be the HOPE Health Policy Committee, made up of leaders in the field of health care delivery. The committee will conduct its series of seminars on the theme "Health and public policy."

Community Drive-In

"Why is Christian broadcasting needed in the San Gabriel Valley?" will be one of the questions asked of Peter Fulton, vice president and general manager of Radio Station K-LIT in Pomona, during an interview with pastor Melvin De Vries at the 10 a.m. service Sunday at Valley Community Drive-In Church, Lone Hill and Covina Boulevard, San Dimas. The subject of the sermon, based on the eighth Commandment, will be "Respect For Property."

Vacation Bible school for children, 3 years old to eighth grade, concludes 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 29 with an all-school program of music, drama and other talent presentations. The Sunday Evening under the Stars films, presented weekly in the drive-in section, continues. (Cont'd on next page) clude a comedy skit, "La Comedia Comica," music by mariachi "Los Halcones" and dances by Ballet Folklorico Aztlan. Event is sponsored by the Guadalupe Society of Holy Name of Mary Parish. (Photo by Peggy Olsen)

Congregation surprises pastor, celebrates 25 years of service

Thinking he and wife simply were to enjoy a Saturday evening meal with a member family, Dr. Aaron L. Plueger was amazed recently to find a large group from his congregation of Christ Lutheran Church, Chino, gathered in the banquet rooms of a local restaurant.

Presbyterian synod to hold annual meeting for 1977-78

Southern California Synod of the United Presbyterian Church will hold the annual meeting Friday through Sunday at Occidental College, Los Angeles.

Business at the annual meeting will include review and recommendation of reports for 1977 and of goals for 1978.

Committees will consider proclamation and ministry.

The synod will also elect and install the synod moderator and vice moderator. Highlights of the meeting will include a theologian speaking on "The Great Heritage of our Reformed Faith," and a "Festival of Faith."

The annual meeting will close with a celebration of faith "Yes to the Here and Now" led by Moderator James Angell of Claremont.

Music for the service will be provided by church choir members, directed by Dr. Tom Summerville, director of music at Occidental College.

The anniversary committee was composed of three Chino members, Roy Harris, Ed Fetzer and John Eide, plus one Ontario member, Susan Decker. They presented a gift from the congregation — a large wall-type grandmother's clock with chimes, fulfilling a desire someone heard the pastor express several months ago.

The next day at the second service at church a number of his relatives were present.

"Also on the drawing board is an educational and administrative center in the heart of the city." Adventists have been active in Zaire (formerly Belgian Congo) for 50 years. With 300,000 baptized church members (not including children under 12), one in 10 Adventists lives in Zaire. The church operates the Songa Hospital in S.E. Zaire, and Kivu Seminary in the nation's northern section. Church members give a special projects offering quarterly, which goes to a different world division for special mission needs. Wanderings, with Walt Brasch

Eulogy for a friend; Part Two: the hustle

The hustle began Wednesday evening, less than six hours after they buried the producer, when the production manager called the widow to demand more money.

The film crew was in the middle of filming a 30-minute theatrical "short," and the production manager decided that his salary of $900 a week wasn't enough. He wanted $2,000 since, as he figured, it was now more difficult — and there were "other" problems since the producer had died.

With his own pencil and paper, the production manager began doing some "figuring," and when he stopped "figuring," he believed that the producer would have made quite a lot of money from this particular film.

And, of course, the production manager figured that it wasn't fair that the producer — now the producer's widow and six children — would get all that money.

The widow — who had been involved with "The Industry" for 17 years, said there wasn't that much money — especially since the production manager had taken it upon himself to hire another cameraman and two assistant cameramen. There were now 12 in the crew, including a scripter whose only talents seemed to be that she smiled a lot at one of the production people who had hired her following the producer's death.

The widow — who was now the producer — tried to explain that the increased costs for the additional crew, for twice the amount of film that was originally budgeted, and for post-production promotion, left little in the budget for what she believed to be outrageous demands.

But the production manager held firm, demanding the salary raise. Had the producer been alive, he would have thrown the production manager off the set, but there was another factor involved.

The other factor was a salesman who decided to become an agent who now represented the "star" whose corporation had put up the money for the filming. This particular salesman — agent decided that he had the brains to keep everything moving along smoothly. After all, with his gold — color Cadillac, $65 shoes, tailored leisure suit, open shirt and three golden chains strung around his neck, he LOOKED Hollywood. Maybe, he believed, he even WAS Hollywood.

Unfortunately, he had never been involved with the film industry before and had made numerous blunders — one of which almost caused the film to be stopped dead. It seems that the salesman — agent — in what he thought to be an offer of friendship — made the wrong overture to a union leader. The union leader sharply told the salesman — agent who thought he was now a big-time producer, that had it not been for the friendship and good working relationships the union had with the now — deceased producer, the film would have been shut down.

The salesman — agent also had decided that it wasn't advisable for the widow to be on the set. He claimed that the widow's presence would distract the "star" who was very fond of the producer. So, the salesman — agent threw the widow off the filming site. And in her grief and confusion, she obeyed.

By Wednesday evening — the day they buried the producer, and three full days after filming began — the crew was two days behind; the star was annoyed, restless, upset, and temperamental; people were yelling at each other, each of them jockeying for position. And half of the crew figured they weren't being paid enough.

The director of photography, the writer — who was involved with a continual development of the film — and the sound engineer all held firm to their commitments; they had signed — on for specific amounts of money to do specific jobs, and they would do those jobs.

The sound engineer was new to the industry, the writer and director of photography were veterans. They knew better than to hold up a production for additional salary demands. And all three of them knew better than to demand money from a widow the day she buried her husband. But the production manager had no such scruples. He just figured he should get more money — more than twice what he was under contract for. The widow's first reaction to the production manager was one of disbelief, then one of shock.

But, the production manager had a friend — the salesman — agent who, in his best macho voice, proclaimed to cast and crew — "We'll do whatever is fair." He decided that it was fair for the production manager to get the additional $1,100 for the week's work. Naturally, the additional expense would come from the widow's pocket.

Well, thought the widow, at least she could count on the Russians not doing anything stupid. She was wrong.

The "Russians" were two Russian immigrants who had been filmmakers in the Soviet Union, but who had defected a couple of years earlier because they were denied artistic freedom.

Neither was political. But in the years in the United States, neither worked very much, and one — who became the director of this particular film — had never worked, except in odd jobs outside the industry. Much of his income came from unemployment insurance.

The writer, knowing how difficult it was for the Russian director to get work in the industry, had gone to the producer and literally begged the producer to "take a chance." The producer, who was also a director, gave the Russian a thorough testing, then decided to give him a position as first assistant director.

It was the first film-related work the Russian director, who spoke halting English, got in more than three years; and the American producer was the first person who had given him the opportunity to work.

The Russian director then got his friend, a Russian cinematographer, a job on the film. So now, the producer was taking a chance with two persons who were untested in American film production techniques.

When the producer died, the first assistant director, the Russian, became the director at an increase of $600 a week. Within hours, he reduced the responsibilities of the director of photography — who was one of the industry's better cinematographers — to give his friend, the Russian cinematographer, control, claiming that the American was "lazy," and "did not know what he was doing."

The production manager, in the meantime, began talking to the Russians — suggesting things. On Thursday, the day after the producer was buried, the Russians demanded more money. Instead of $1,500 for the week, the director wanted $2,100 — plus an additional $1,000 to oversee the editing — something directors do as part of their commitments. The Russian cinematographer demanded $2,000 for the week. Naturally, the salesman — agent agreed — it was, as he proudly proclaimed, "only fair."

Then, an assistant cameraman, who was supposed to get $75 a day, decided that $200 a day was "fair." And someone else submitted an expense voucher for eight hours driving time from Los Angeles to Victorville, about 100 miles away.

Next, the salesman — agent who thought he was a producer, with the approval of the director, the cinematographer, and the production manager, decided that the film editor wasn't "capable." So, the film editor, who had taken numerous films through editing, was dismissed, and now the "team of 4" was going to edit the film — if they could just get it out of the lab.

It was then that they found that the widow knew the system — she controlled the negative. "You don't have a film," she had been telling them all along. "You're crazy," they told her, and demanded — and got — more money.

So, when everyone realized that the film was now a month behind schedule, they began talking — seriously. The widow wanted no part of the film, or anyone in it. "Buy me out," she said coolly. They had no other choice, but she still lost money on it.

A few days ago, the widow saw the "star" who looked at her, then said, simply — "I see what you mean — they're ALL a bunch of bastards."

Law protects against shots

The California state Legislature has passed a first-of-its-kind law which provides for medical expenses for children who suffer catastrophic reactions to required immunizations.

The new law requires that the state Department of Health pay up to $25,000 for medical expenses incurred for a child under the age of 18 as a result of a severe reaction to a state-required immunization.

Noisy cat not cause of sleep difficulties

By R. Cliff Waters

We have a cat. That isn't quite right — we do not own a cat, but one has decided our back yard fence is its home.

I can't tell you our cat's size or the color of its coat. I can't tell you if it is an Abyssinian or a Siamese. You see, I've never seen our cat.

I do hear our cat though... each night, loud and clear. I do not have words to describe this animal's voice! The "words" I have used to describe the cacophony of sounds that emit from the throat of this evil beast cannot be printed here. Each night I wait and worry. Will I sleep tonight?

I feel I am coming apart. My heart rate is overly rapid, I lack alertness during the day, I am irritable and I need sleep. I have diagnosed myself: transient insomnia, arising from poor sleeping conditions and psychological stress (hate for all felines!).

As soon as I am rid of that cat, my symptoms — feeling I am coming unglued, sluggishness, and a tendency to swear at the paper clips — will disappear. As usual when I have a problem, I am researching the matter. What is insomnia?

Insomnia is defined as the inability to sleep a "normal" amount each night. Most people have trouble sleeping some of the time, and some people have trouble sleeping most of the time. Chronic insomnia occurs in as much as 15 percent of the population. It is real, but has no proven cause and can only be treated symptomatically.

How much sleep is "normal"? The body's need for sleep varies widely from person to person, ranging from as little as four hours to as much as 10. No single standard, say eight hours, can be set as normal for adults. The right amount of sleep for one person might be very wrong for another.

At one time or another, most people suffer from periods of sleeplessness resulting from grief, worry, tension, or stress. Individuals suffering from depression or other psychological problems frequently have disturbed sleep, such as early morning awakenings, trouble falling asleep, or difficulty staying asleep.

If the problem is severe enough, it may require psychotherapy. The pain of an injury or illness may also interfere with sleep.

O.K., barring that my friend the cat is not joined by more of his/her species — how can a body get off to sleep? Experts in sleep research have the following suggestions to help you fall asleep and sleep better:

— Avoid napping during the day, particularly an after-dinner snooze. One period of sustained sleep seems to work far better than a series of short naps during the day.

— Don't drink caffeine-containing beverages after midafternoon. Such drinks can make it hard to fall asleep.

— Exercise every day. Moderate physical activity can be conducive to longer, deeper sleep. Sexual activity can also induce drowsiness for some people.

— Establish a regular schedule, including a regular time to go to bed and to wake up. Once the schedule is "programmed" into a daily sleep-wake cycle, sleep is easier to achieve.

— Set up a bedtime routine for the hour or two before retiring — take a warm bath, or read in bed. The quality as well as the quantity of sleep changes with age. The deep, refreshing sleep so typical of children begins to wane in middle life. Older people spend more of the night in light sleep and less time sleeping deeply. Their sleep is often fitful and fragmented by frequent awakenings.

— If you're not sleepy, get out of bed. Tossing and turning and worrying about getting to sleep is only going to worsen things. Go sit in a chair and read.

— If the insomnia continues for several weeks and doesn't respond to the above measures, seek professional help.

CAREFUL ATTENTION — Lab technician Ann Brierton checks the respiratory condition of a California sea lion brought to Marineland's stranded animal program in critical condition.

Stranded and injured animals are nursed back to health and returned to their natural habitat whenever possible. Others will gain new homes in marine parks throughout the country.

RECUPERATION — Lab technician Katherine O'Sullivan carries two sea birds to new quarters at Marineland's newly opened marine animal care center. The special section for marine birds provides large spaces for birds to walk, spread their wings, and swim. The facility also allows the young to be cared for in separate facilities, where they can be fed as often as needed.

MATERNITY — A mother and baby enjoy the water in their section of the Marineland marine animal care center. The two are among the many harbor seals housed in the new facility which has areas for animals as diverse as young birds and mature elephant seals.

Clinic serves sick sea birds, mammals

The best care a marine animal can get will be available at Hanna-Barbera's Marineland in the new marine animal care center.

The $200,000 animal clinic will house facilities never before available for the treatment and rehabilitation of sick and wounded marine animals.

The care center will serve all varieties of marine mammals and birds in special living quarters geared to the animal's specific needs.

For example, elephant seals — large animals, who enjoy soaking in the water and crawling on land — will have wading pools and large patio areas. On the other hand, dolphins will have a large pool to accommodate their ability as expert swimmers.

The baby animals will be separated from the large adults to give them a fair chance at recovery. "The marine bird area is very special, because usually a bird is treated in a cage," explains Kym Murphy, director of operations. The birds will have large spaces to walk, spread their wings and swim.

There will also be confined holding areas and pools for those animals that need to be quarantined or that require intensive care. These areas have been designed to minimize human handling while medicating or running tests on the animals.

Indoor areas will be available for very small, immature animals that require special heat lamps and 24-hour attention which would include bottle feeding.

The laboratory will be a fully-equipped facility which will turn out immediate results on blood tests and skin cultures, and also serve as a water quality testing area.

Immunizations and surgery will be performed in the lab along with other special procedures prescribed by the consulting veterinarian. A fully stocked pharmacy will also be in the marine animal care center, for use in administering vitamins and antibiotics.

This unique facility is a direct result of Marineland's one-of-a-kind stranded animal program. In 1970 Marineland joined forces with the Los Angeles County Health Department to rescue and treat animals and assist in monitoring trends in marine mammal diseases and deaths as they pertain to natural or man-made conditions. Marineland has continued to assist in this type of research.

"Marineland has been the only hope for sea-mammals and birds that are stranded on beaches ranging from Malibu to Huntington," said Michael J. Downs, general manager.

"Our curators, with proper veterinarian supervision have consistently managed to save at least 30 percent of these waifs. Most are young and, when brought to us, are on the verge of dying of malnutrition, parasitic infections or injuries."

"Those we do successfully nurse back to health go on, where practicable, to 'foster' homes consisting of aquariums, sea life parks and zoological gardens throughout the nation. Others are returned to their natural habitat," he said.

Brad Andrews, Marineland's assistant curator of mammals, pointed out that the stranded animal program, which has been ongoing for over eight years involves not only curing parasitic infections but treating gunshot wounds, removing fish hooks and sludge by animals immersed in oil slicks.

"We set, when possible, broken wings and injured feet. And in the case of very young stranded mammals we bottle-feed them with special formulas every three hours around the clock," he noted.

When an animal is rescued by an agency or private citizen, it is brought to the marine animal care center.

A complete physical and any tests deemed necessary, are performed, diagnosis made, therapy given, antibiotics administered (if necessary) and, of course, the animal is fed.

Once a stranded animal has fully recovered, the decision is made where it will live. The animal may find a permanent home at Marineland or be transferred to another animal park in the United States.

"This choice is usually the case when an animal has taken a lengthy period of time to recover, he or she has then become too dependent on people to successfully return to the wild," according to Tom Otten, head curator.

Adopting animals out to other facilities is an integral part of the stranded animal program. Marineland's beached animal transfer program will virtually wipe out any further hunting or trapping of most marine mammals for display purposes.

The other living arrangement choice for these animals is returning the animal to its natural habitat. The Marineland staff has devised a training program to retrain animals to hunt for their own food. In June of 1977 the success of this program was witnessed with the release of eight California Sea Lions at Santa Barbara.

"It is our sincere hope to reintroduce many more animals back to their natural habitat," says Otten.

Due to overwhelming public interest in the park's animals, a unique feature has been included in the marine animal care center. A glass lab area, equipped with two-way microphones, will enable visitors to view and ask questions about medical procedures being conducted by the attending lab technicians.

With the new facility, the staff at Marineland anticipates an excellent marine animal health care program, and looks forward to the opportunity of sharing this unique experience with the public at Hanna-Barbera's Marineland.

RESCUE — Assistant curator Brad Andrews and trainer Craig Wilcox discuss treatment for a paralyzed sea lion at Marineland's marine animal care center. Animals brought to the center suffer from malnutrition, parasite infections, and injuries such as gun shot wounds and broken wings. A veterinarian oversees care for all of the animals treated at the new center.

Pet skin tumor needs diagnosis

By Robert L. Stear, D.V.M.

Manager of Veterinary Services
Norden Laboratories

Your pet's skin is a sensitive organ that performs numerous functions important for its survival. Like any organ, it is susceptible to injury — cuts, infection, and sometimes troublesome tumors.

A tumor is usually defined as an uncontrolled growth of tissue. Tumors can be benign or malignant. A benign tumor is usually slow-growing, round or oval in shape and generally does not interfere with the functioning of the pet's vital organs.

In contrast, a malignant tumor often grows rapidly and destroys normal tissue. Cells from a malignant tumor can break off and travel through the bloodstream to other parts of the body.

The most common form of benign skin tumors in dogs are warts. Generally seen in older dogs, warts can appear singly or in groups. Warts pose no threat to the pet unless they are irritated by friction from a collar, the floor or other hard surface. In such cases, your veterinarian may recommend surgical removal of the wart so it does not become infected.

Of course not all skin tumors appear as warts. Some tumors resemble festering sores or small growths under the skin that you feel rather than see. The tumor may be a firm, enclosed mass shifting under the pressure of your fingers or an inflamed fluid-filled cyst.

The female dogs, what appears to be a skin tumor on the underside of the body can be a breast tumor and should be examined by a veterinarian. As with other tumors in dogs, most are benign and can be readily removed.

The treatment recommended for skin tumors is not always surgery. Sometimes X-ray treatment is effective; often specific types of tumors disappear spontaneously over one to three months. But only your veterinarian should select the proper treatment.

Skin tumors are more serious when they occur in cats. In more than 50 percent of the cases, these tumors are malignant and should be surgically removed. Certain breeds seem especially prone to ulcerating growths along the tips of the ears — possibly as a result of too much sun.

Generally, there is no sure way for the average pet owner to distinguish a benign tumor from a malignant one. In fact, veterinary research has not yet identified all possible causes for tumors in pets.

Viruses seem to be primary agents, but parasites, bodily injury or exposure to certain chemicals also contribute to tumor growth. Any lump or growth on or under the skin is potentially serious. It's important to consult your veterinarian for diagnosis and treatment at the first sign of an unusual growth.

AWARD WINNER!
for outstanding innovative land-planning

Saddlewood for only 9 more families!

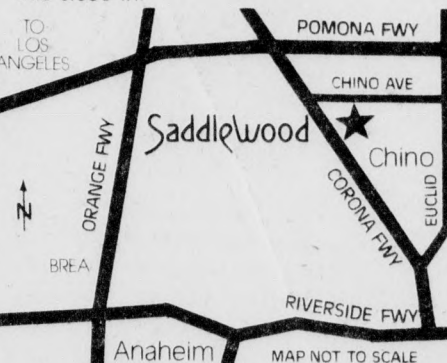

It's the great big lot that got me. Mine's more than a half-acre—others are even bigger, some smaller. I have that wide open country feeling here and yet, I'm less than two minutes from the Pomona Freeway to Orange County. I've got a boat and camper space behind the 3-car garage—(out of sight!) and we're starting the pool next week. There's plenty of value packed into this community!

Beautiful quality—that's what I've got. Ceramic tile in the entry. In my kitchen, General Electric range and ovens, dishwasher, disposal and even a compactor! The family room is great with the fireplace, family breakfast bar and all the big outdoors shows through the wide glass sliding doors. And in the back, dad and the kids want a pool. I want a jacuzzi—there's room enough for just about anything! Another thing, the builder set up a guaranteed sale of our other home!

Now, I can have my horse, and he can have his big corral and stable. And we can ride out the back gate right into the super trail system, then all around to our own Saddlewood Equestrian Center. It's a great meeting place for friends. There's a training ring, washdown and a trailer turn-around when "Star" and I go to the horse shows.

If I'm not playing ball at the park or with my family barbecuing at Saddlewood's picnic grounds right next to the Equestrian Center, well, then I'm playing out back. Even with the horse, the camper, the boat and soon we'll add the pool there is more yard left than we had altogether at the old house all the kids love it!

Saddlewood, located on the western-most side of Chino, extra close to downtown Los Angeles (less than 45 minutes) via the Pomona Freeway, just a mile away. Very possibly the best half-acre-lot, big family-home community this close-in!

Models open daily 10 to 6. Take the Chino Avenue exit east from the Corona Freeway, Chino (714) 628-4761.

EASY AND ELEGANT
— Choose microwave or conventional cooking to make this fish florentine recipe that has group appeal but fits perfectly into a well-balanced diet. The great flavor and taste of fish florentine more than makes up for what it lacks in calories. In fact, this is a very elegant specialty, yet it is easy to make. The rich looking sauce is only yogurt combined with a little pesto sauce and the pan juices from cooking the fish.

Easy, low-calorie fish entree makes elegant company dinner

Menus for entertaining are often richer and more caloric laden than need be. For those watching their weight and those interested in good food here is a great low cal entree that is special enough for company. This fish florentine recipe has gourmet appeal but fits perfectly into a well-balanced milk diet.

This sensible eating plan is based on two glasses of milk a day plus other wholesome foods from the basic four food groups. Milk, of course, is one of the most nourishing foods for the calories contained that you can eat. It's an excellent source of calcium, protein, riboflavin and contains phosphorus, thiamin, the B vitamins and vitamins A and D. Sometimes, instead of drinking your milk, you may eat it ... in the form of yogurt, for instance. This delicious dairy food has the same calories and nutrient value as the milk from which it was made. Plain yogurt made from whole milk contains 159 calories per 8 ounces.

But back to our party dish. You can cook it in a microwave oven in 15 minutes. Done in the conventional manner will take a little longer. Both versions of the recipe are given here.

The great flavor and taste of fish florentine more than makes up for what it lacks in calories! In fact, this is a very elegant specialty yet it is easy to make.

Try easy, tasty snacking bread

Would you enjoy biting into a warm slice of fresh, homemade bread but shy away from making bread yourself because of the so-called "fuss and bother"?

Well hesitate no more! There is a type of bread that will satisfy your yearning and is easy to make, taking less time to prepare than its cousin, the yeast bread. Quick breads are the answer, and they're growing in popularity especially with today's current lifestyles demanding shortcut cooking methods.

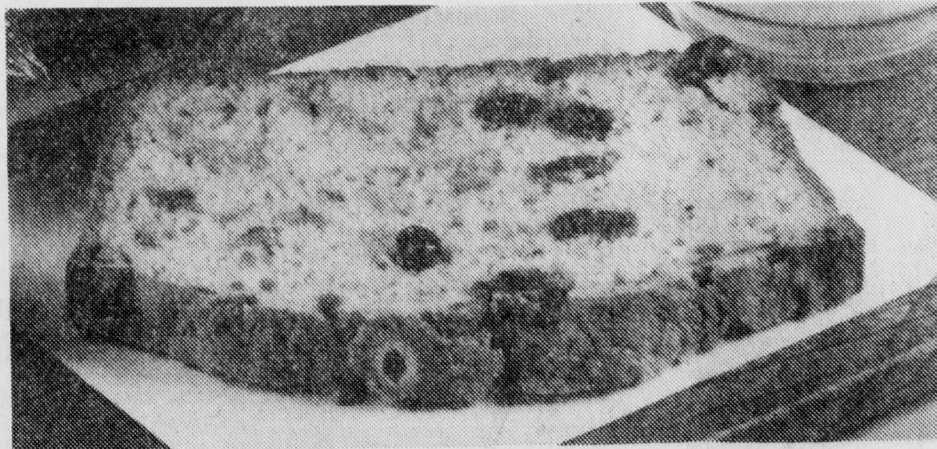

A tasty addition to any meal, this quick bread selection - Carrot Bread - is also a nutritious snack to satisfy hunger needs in between meals. Shredded raw carrots form the base of the batter to provide essential vegetable fiber and vitamin A value while raisins contribute iron and other minerals. The ease of it all is there's no having to wait for dough to rise, and then rise again! The batter ingredients are simply mixed together and then poured into prepared pans ready for the oven.

As long as you're making one batch, why not double it and freeze one loaf for busier days when baking time is at a premium. Bake both loaves in heavy duty aluminum wrap lined pans to ease cleanup, then freeze one loaf in its own foil lining. Heavy duty aluminum foil is the correct weight to wrap breads for freezing because it is heavier than regular weight aluminum foil and provides the moisture-proof, vapor-proof protection foods need in freezer storage. If there's any remaining portion from the bread loaf you serve, wrap the leftover in its foil lining to store until needed again.

Carrot Bread

4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking powder

TASTY SNACK — A slice of Carrot Bread, with shredded carrot and raisins peeking through, is a tasty snack with a glass of chilled milk. Nothing better than a slice of warm

1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups flour
2 cups finely shredded raw carrot
½ cup raisins
½ cup chopped walnuts

Line two 9x5x3 - inch loaf pans with heavy duty aluminum wrap leaving ½-inch collar around edges; grease bottom and sides of foil. Measure all ingredients except flour, carrots, raisins and nuts into large mixing bowl.

Beat ½ minute on low speed, scraping constantly. Beat 1 minute on medium speed, scraping constantly, until smooth. Stir flour gradually into mixture; mix in remaining ingredients. Divide batter between prepared pans. Bake in a 350 degree F. oven for 50 minutes or until tested done. Cool in pans for 5-10 minutes; remove from pans and cool thoroughly. To freeze, cover with a piece of foil the size of the top of loaf and collar.

NOTICE INVITING BIDS
For Construction of Reinforced Concrete Storm Drain and Inlet Facility
West State Street

Groundwater Recharge Basin
RECEIPT OF PROPOSALS:
Sealed proposals will be received at the office of L.D. King, 517 N. Euclid Avenue, Ontario, California 91762 until 10:00 o'clock a.m. on Monday, July 10, 1978, for furnishing all plant, labor, materials and equipment for construction of concrete storm drain and inlet facilities at the West State Street Groundwater Recharge Basin. The proposals will be publicly opened and read in said office at 10:00 o'clock a.m. on the date above mentioned.

LOCATION OF WORK:
The Chino Basin Water Conservation District's West State Street Groundwater Recharge Basin is located in the City of Montclair in the County of San Bernardino and is bounded on the north by Brooks Street, on the west by Silicon Avenue, on the south by West State Street, and on the east by Ramona Avenue.

DESCRIPTION OF WORK:
The entire work is contained in a single bid schedule for which bids will be received. The work includes the construction of a reinforced concrete storm drain and inlet facility, consisting of the removal of existing concrete channel lining, excavation, backfill, jacking in place of reinforced concrete pipe, construction of a reinforced concrete inlet structure, reconstruction of concrete channel lining, and other incidental work.

COMPLETION OF WORK:
All work shall be completed within sixty (60) calendar days after the date of the execution of the contract by the District.

OBTAINING CONTRACT DOCUMENTS: Plans and specifications and all contract documents may be obtained from the Project Engineer, L. D. KING, Ontario, California, 91762, upon deposit of $20.00 payable in advance to said Engineer. The deposit will be refunded upon the receipt of the plans and specifications by the Engineer within fifteen (15) days after opening of bids. Documents will be mailed upon the receipt of $2.00 per set for mailing and handling.

PROPOSAL GUARANTEE
Each proposal must be accompanied by cash or by a cashier's or certified check or by a bid bond in the amount of ten percent (10%) of the amount of the bid price, made payable to the order of the Secretary to the Board, Chino Basin Water Conservation District, as a guaranty that the bidder, if the award is made to him in accordance with the terms of his proposal, will promptly execute a contract in the required form, secure payment of workmen's compensation insurance, and furnish a satisfactory faithful performance bond and a labor and material bond. The faithful performance bond shall be in the sum of not less than one hundred percent (100%) of the estimated aggregate amount of the payments to be made under the contract, computed on the basis of the prices stated in the proposal. The labor and material bond shall be in the sum of not less than fifty percent (50%) of the estimated aggregate amount of the payments to be made under the contract, computed on the basis of the prices stated in the proposal. In addition to the above, and if requested by the District, the bidder shall furnish a financial statement of recent date. Failure to comply with this requirement will render a bid informal and shall be sufficient cause for rejection.

WAGE RATES: Pursuant to applicable provisions of the Labor Code of the State of California, not less than the general prevailing rate of per diem wages including legal holidays, and overtime work for each craft or type of workman needed to execute the work contemplated under this agreement shall be paid to all workmen employed on the work to be done according to this contract by the Contractor, or any Subcontractor, shall be deemed to include employee payments for health and welfare, pension, vacation and similar purposes and shall be in addition to the prevailing hourly rate adopted in accordance with Section 1773.2 of said Labor Code by the Board of the Chino Basin Water Conservation District.

OWNER'S RIGHT RESERVED:
The Board of the Chino Basin Water Conservation District reserves the right to reject any and all bids to waive any informality in a bid and to make awards as the interest of the District may require. This notice is given by order of the Board of the Chino Basin Water Conservation District.

"The Want Ads

"The Want Ads
are coming!"

Paul Revere used the Want Ads. In fact, people were using Want Ads about a century before the birth of our Nation.

Revere's ad was published in a Boston newspaper late in the 18th century. It was used to advertise his bell and cannon foundry.

CAST BELLS, of all sizes: every kind of brass ORDNANCE, and every kind of composition work for SHIPS, etc. at the shortest notice; manufacture COPPER into sheets, bolts, spikes, nails, rivets, dovetails, etc. from malleable copper."

PAUL REVERE USED THE WANT ADS TO ADVERTISE HIS BELL AND CANNON FOUNDRY.

Classified is one of the great and enduring things in the American heritage. Today, as they did 300 years ago, Want Ads are the universal medium for buying and selling, trading, finding things, locating jobs, obtaining a new home, plus a myriad of other goods and services.

Want Ads also are still the lowest-cost medium -- the smart way to advertise things you wish to sell, such as those no-longer-needed articles collecting dust around the house or garage. Give us a call and find how easy it is to turn those things into welcome extra money. A friendly Ad-Visor will help you word your message.
